CPMK is an interdisciplinary research that provides opportunities to improve your communication and critical thinking, so can be applied in various conditions, such as oral and written communication and critical thinking for students and teachers, sales, marketing or. The Mumsnet message boards is always worth a peek. Sometimes the mother-of-one can sound like a very angry mother, but it's a message board, a website – not real life. At the time, the Superdry campaign (which stated that women can't have a career or a family) may have been rather patronising, but there is a common thread of frustration and missed opportunities for women in the fast-paced industry they work in. The author of an ad for a dating site for bisexuals which described women as "R.A.B" – raging attention-bitch - has defended it saying it was "not meant to offend. It was to highlight the fact that men love women who hate men and vice versa." And what of the event's organisers, who have now apologised? I'd like to ask: what would you like to be the next Mumsnet ad? Images: The Guardian.
